

WASHINGTON D.C. – The House Oversight and Government Reform Committee today released a video capturing the morning-after feelings of the American people toward ObamaCare: queasy about the billions of dollars in new debt the bill puts on their families, regretful that House Democrats rammed the partisan bill through without consideration of the public's serious concerns and ashamed of the myriad legislative kickbacks stuffed into the bill to secure Democrat votes and buy off the opposition. Bottom line: America is feeling The Health Care Hangover.

"The party is over and now we are all going to have to deal with the economically sickening side effects of ObamaCare," Ranking Member Darrell Issa (R-CA) said. "But we will continue to fight for real health care reform that cuts costs while responsibly increasing access – reform that helps boost jobs and global competitiveness and doesn't leave America economically nauseous."
